This is a very interesting application. It has a lot of potential for artist connecting and sharing music through one local source. However, the interface leaves a lot to be desired. First of all, the input text boxes for the art is confusing to use, :u and :p don't describe to me what directory I am searching in or what directory I am putting it in. Overall I don't really know what each of these text input boxes are from and when I input something, the only message I receive is “wrong credentials”. While this does let me know that I inputted the information was wrong, it doesn't tell me what I did wrong and in what text box. Also, a slight problem the error box is slightly smaller than I would like, blocking off half of the exit button.

The archive section is a little more straightforward and easy to use. Search for artist is easy and displays while you type it in. From this screen you can view artists music and see what album they are in. It is also easy to share these songs and you receive a message that you have successfully shared the song. This all works fine but from here on the program becomes a little obtrusive. There doesn't seem to be a way to go from the search screen back to the main archive. The only way to do this seems to be to exit out of the whole program and start it up again.

Overall, this is a great idea that could be implemented a lot better. The overall method for inputting things into the archive is not straightforward at all and hard to understand. Also, while the searching and sharing on the archive is very easy to use, their is no way to go back to the main screen once your their. If these problems are fixed, i feel this could be a very good application for sharing art and music.
